DRIVER DIES IN CAR PLUNGE

New Post Office To Open On Sunday

By JANE VOILES

Have you been down to Jack London's Valley of the Moon lately? Although the valley hasn't the fresh, invigorating air of our foothills, it has a virile, windswept quality that makes a pleasant change. The Jack London house on the 1400 acre ranch has been turned into a guest house by the Shepherds (London's nephew and niece). You can make reservations for a vacation period or for luncheon. May we say that this is no free ad for the place as we paid good money for our lunch.

At one time the Valley of the Moon belonged to General Hooker, Fighting Joe of the Civil War. In the house which was built in the sixties, the Shepherds preserve carefully the London atmosphere. You see in the dining room, pictures, bas-reliefs, a samovar, many of London's possessions which have a story and which the Shepherds, who are charming hosts, take the time to tell, if you are interested. We were there on Mr. Shepherd's birthday so we came in for a piece of the birthday cake served on a cake dish which was a gift of Jack London to his sister Eliza Shepherd in 1905. On the back of the dish in gold brush is the inscription "Jack to Eliza - 1905." We were curious about the more than one hundred clothes pins which were clipped over the door. They were, we were informed, the "napkin rings" of the guests. As each guest returns after an absence, they find their clothes pin, with their name printed on it.

The place of prime interest is the writing room where Jack London wrote every morning from eight to eleven-thirty. Here you see manuscripts in cases, photographs of friends and dogs—Buck is among the latter, some articles of clothing, among them a favorite old corduroy cap. The old table upon which London wrote his first stories has a place of honor. We were mightily impressed by Jack London's files which are in apple order and Mr. Shepherd assured us that London always kept them that way. They consisted of some thirty boxes neatly labeled: Names for stories; fiction data; short story plots; notes on Japan; rejection slips. It might be consoling to the struggling writers to know that there were a heap of these.

Two copies of this prayer were in the room. It was a favorite of Jack London:

"Now I get me up to work
I pray the Lord I may not shirk;
If I should die before the night
I pray the Lord, my work's alright."

The Post Office in Placerville will begin service from its new building at the corner of Main Street and Bedford Avenue with the distribution to box patrons of the Sunday morning mail.

Completion of the new building will be feted Saturday afternoon in public exercises at 2 o'clock on the front steps of the building during which the cornerstone of the building will be placed under the auspices of the Masonic lodge, and the structure will be dedicated under auspices of the Native Sons of the Golden West.

Cosumnes Mine Lease Signed

Dredging Concern Will Work 3-Mile Stretch
Along The Middle Fork

The Greenhorn Dredging Company has leased three miles of land along the Middle Fork of the Cosumnes River east of Baker's Ford bridge and is conducting preliminary surveys preparatory to starting work.

This is according to announcement Friday by A. C. Winkelman, of the Anderson Realty Agency, through whom the lease for the property was arranged.

The lease covers the Arroyo Seco property and extends up to the James Barkley property, including several pieces lying between the two larger holdings.

The dredging concern has been operating in the Colfax district for some time past and looks forward to three years of work on the newly acquired holdings.

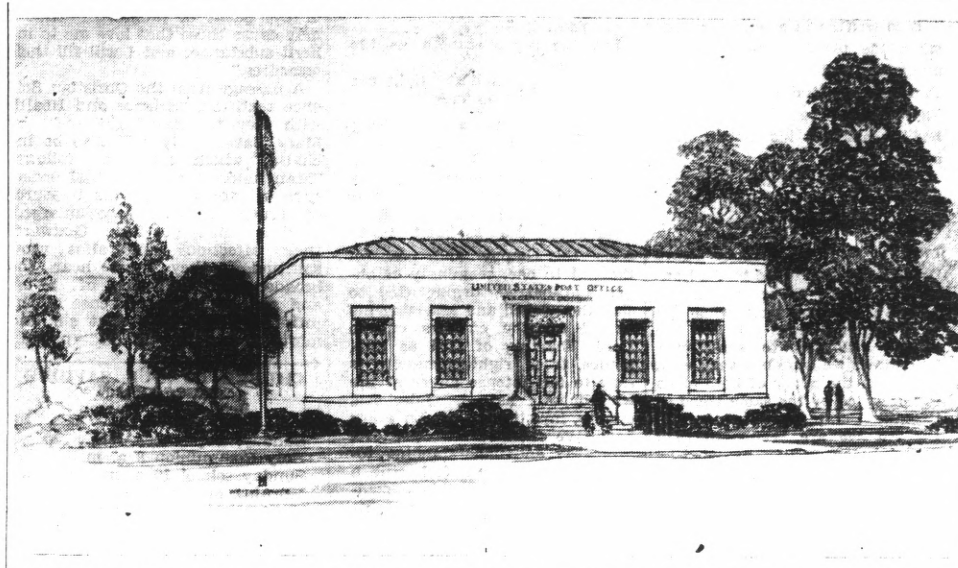

Principal owners in the company are Frank A. Devine, Rhodes Grimshaw, of Auburn, Frank Willard and Louis Bianchi, of Stockton.

AIR TRAFFIC INCREASES RESULT IN NEW FLIGHT SCHEDULE

As a result of air traffic increases of more than 200 per cent during August from San Francisco, American Airlines, Inc., today announced inauguration, effective September 15, of a fifth transcontinental air schedule from California to the east.

The American Mercury will operate in two sections daily—the Advance Mercury and the Limited Mercury, according to W. Thorne Rimes, city sales manager for the Mercury.

Rimes stated that American Airlines, Inc., transported over 90,000 revenue passengers last month.

CEREMONIES MARKING THE COMPLETION of Placerville's new Post Office Building, at the corner of Bedford Avenue and Main Street, will be held at the front of the building Saturday afternoon when the corner stone will be laid and the building dedicated. Mail services will start Sunday morning in the new building. Above is an architect's drawing of the recently completed structure.

SCOUTS AND SCOUTERS TAKE UP FALL, WINTER PROGRAM

District Committee Meeting Called For
Tuesday, September 24th, At Diamond
Springs; Henderson Barbecue Host

With the approach of the Fall season, Boy Scout troops of the county and the county's Scouters are taking up the fall and winter program of the organization.

The September meeting of the county Boy Scout executive committee will be held on Tuesday, September 24th, at the home of District Chairman W. T. Henderson, at Diamond Springs.

Committeemen are being asked to meet at six o'clock for a barbecue, with the district chairman as host, and the supper will be followed by the business meeting of the committee. The Camino troop of Boy Scouts, with George Burrows as Scoutmaster, held its second meeting of the fall season Thursday evening with nineteen Boy Scouts in attendance out of a total of 22 enrolled. The Lions Club troop committee met Friday noon at Hotel Raffles preparatory to outlining a winter program of special activity and reports from Scoutmaster Charles Doe stated that the Diamond Springs troop is functioning with characteristic efficiency.

TRAGIC WASTE OF MAN-POWER NOTED BY INDUSTRIAL COMMISSIONER

ALBANY, N. Y., (UP)—Frieda S. Miller, New York state's industrial commissioner, estimates that more than 600,000 skilled craftsmen are job-hunting through the public employment agencies of the nation because they are unable to meet the specifications which industry demands.

Miss Miller said there was an actual shortage of A-1 tool and die men who had had experience within the past three months in the aircraft industry.

On the other hand, she declared, there was no acute shortage of men who had had experience in highly skilled work in the past.

"But thousands of them had been out of their trades for months if not years," she said. "Their skills were rusty."

She pointed out that the skills of these men were once keen and that they represented a "tragic waste of man-power."

BAD MANNERS RESPONSIBLE FOR MANY TRAFFIC INCIDENTS

SACRAMENTO — How are your motor manners? Do you always demand your full share of the highway, regardless of the rights of others? Do you rush through intersections without looking to the right or left? Do you force pedestrians to jump for their lives?

If you are guilty of these or any other breaches of highway etiquette the chances are you will be involved in an accident soon or cause someone else to be injured or killed.

This was the conclusion reached today by James M. Carter, Director of Motor Vehicles, after checking on California accident causes.

A direct appeal to all safety groups to stress courtesy is to be made, Carter said, adding that education can do much to improve general safety conditions.

Dr. Dormody Called In Rescue At Sea

Friends of Dr. Horace Dormody, son of Mrs. L. J. Dormody, of Placerville, will be interested to know the details of a recent "rescue at sea" in which the doctor played a principal part.

Dr. Dormody is associated with his brother, Dr. Hugh Dormody, in the operation of Monterey hospital and the rescue which he helped to effect took place Tuesday evening, Sept. 10.

Word was received at the Monterey waterfront late Tuesday afternoon that the lumber schooner "Holly-wood" was somewhere off the coast south of Monterey with its chief steward, George Ellis, in a critical condition due to a ruptured appendix.

The U. S. S. Gamble was lying in the harbor and arrangements were made to have Dr. Dormody board the war-craft and go to the patient's side. Steaming out of Monterey shortly after 5:30 o'clock, the destroyer was alongside the "Hollywood" an hour later.

Neither the lumber schooner nor the destroyer offered facilities for an immediate operation and so the patient was transferred to the destroyer, which returned to Monterey.

A final hurdle presented itself in the matter of determining how to get the patient ashore, but a fisherman offered the use of his boat, took the patient from the destroyer to the shore, and he was removed to the hospital where, five hours after Dr. Dormody entered the case, the patient was operated upon.

According to the Monterey Peninsula Herald, from which the above facts are gleaned, the patient was resting easily Wednesday.

OWNER OF CHARRED MONEY FINDS UNCLE SAM GENEROUS

CAMDEN, N. J. (UP)—The Federal government cooperated to provide one pleasant touch to Camden's disastrous $2,000,000 fire in which a paint plant and 63 homes were destroyed and 10 persons died.

One of the householders recovered a tin box containing the ashes of charred money. The box was sent to Federal Reserve experts in Washington.

The experts notified the owner they had "only" been able to identify $381.61 of the money which went through the terrific heat of the blaze.

That was fine with the owner. She had thought the box contained only $329.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Stewart, of Oakland and formerly of Placerville, were in town Friday morning enroute home from a vacation trip in the higher country and included this office in their calls upon old-time friends.

L. H. Chesbro was here Friday from Auburn greeting some of his old-time friends and looking after business for the Standard Oil Company.

Hawaii Busy, Says Visitor

J. T. Ainsworth was home again Friday after spending five months in the Hawaiian Islands.

The former Placerville barber shop proprietor reported that there is a great amount of building in the islands under federal sponsorship, and that skilled artisans find their services greatly in demand.

Some craftsmen, he stated, are being imported to the islands from the states to supply the need for skilled workers.

"Times are as good out there as I ever saw them anywhere," Ainsworth said.

"I enjoyed every minute of my stay there."

He reported he was specially impressed by the sub-tropical foliage and by the numerous volcanic craters on the islands.

During the trip he traveled about 4,000 miles by water and about 300 miles by plane. He found work in Honolulu in his trade and had a "work-as-you-go" vacation.

DEER HUNTERS ASKED TO AID

Season's Outlook Good;
Forest Service Urges
Caution Against Fires

SAN FRANCISCO — Aware that California deer and bird hunters are their own best monitors in adhering to the sportsman's code of ethics, the United States Forest Service has just issued a cautionary notice in the interests of forest fire prevention during the deer season opening Monday.

"We haven't funds to assign as many patrolmen as in previous years to guard against hunters' fires this fall," said Region Forester S. B. Shaw. "And if my opinion of sportsmen is correct we won't have to."

"Despite severe fall fire hazards in the woods the past several years, hundreds of hunters have proved to us quite conclusively that they can be careful with their campfires, warming fires and smoking materials."

"The woods are mighty dry this fall again so it will be another acid test for nimrods to show that they can prevent outbreaks of man-caused fires on their hunting grounds and the nation's forests."

Eldorado Forest Supervisor Edwin F. Smith adds that hunters find it behooves them to keep order in their own family in taking care with fire, for hunters, like anyone else, are subject to being drafted into the fire fighting ranks when forest fires occur, and swinging an axe or a shovel on the fire line probably would not be relished by many hunters who planned to spend their time tramping through the woods in search of elusive bucks.

The northern California deer season opening September 16 has prospects of bringing some of the finest hunting in years, the Forest Service reports. Fawn crops over the state during the past few years have been exceptionally good. In most localities bucks are in splendid condition.

Many big bucks have been seen by rangers in the high country of the Sierra, the northern Coast Range and the Cascade region, particularly in the Modoc Forest where the largest herds of Rocky Mountain mule deer are found.

The Forest Service has established a number of checking stations throughout popular hunting areas where measurements will be taken to determine the condition and quality of deer in the national forests. Attendants also will keep tabs on the fire situation.

The cooperation of sportsmen in registering their kills has been especially helpful in deer management. Such studies may be used as a basis for analyzing and regulating deer populations.

Mrs. Patricia Darlington left on Thursday to spend several days at Phillips Station.

Elon Dunlap was a caller on Friday from Diamond Springs.

CAR HURTTLED 400 FT. OFF HIGHWAY

Coroner Investigating
Whereabouts Of Autoist
Since Last Monday

Morris Harlan, Jr., 27, of Lodi, was killed sometime between Monday and Thursday when his car plunged 400 feet down a cliff off the Alpine Highway on the Carson Spur near the Kit Carson summit.

According to A. J. Orelli, the car hurtled through the air four hundred feet and wrapped itself around a tree as it landed.

Harlan's body, recovered late Thursday afternoon, was removed to Stockton for funeral services and interment and Coroner Orelli announced Friday he would visit the scene during the afternoon and subsequently would visit Lodi to learn more about the young man's departure from his home and such other circumstances as might shed light on events leading up to his tragic death.

An inquest is pending but is not scheduled at this time.

As far as we know, Harlan left his home in Lodi on September 9, which was Monday, the Coroner said. His body was found on Thursday. Whether he died Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday or early Thursday has not been established, and thus far his whereabouts have not been determined since he left home Monday.

The death certificate, filled out by the coroner, shows that Harlan was a business agent for a Stockton newspaper, that he was a native of Philadelphia and that he is survived by his wife, in Stockton. Death, the certificate says, was occasioned by a fractured skull.

Christmas Seal Sale Planned

Regional Conference
At Woodland Launches
Preparations For Work

By MILDRED M. BLAIR
Publicity Chairman

A regional conference conducted by the California Tuberculosis Association was held in Woodland on Wednesday, September 11th. This was one of eleven regional conferences held throughout the state in preparation for the 34th annual Christmas Seal sale.

Twenty-four were present, representing three counties, Amador, Yolo and El Dorado.

The principal speaker was Mrs. Estelle Edison, secretary of the Sacramento Tuberculosis Association. She was assisted by Miss Audrey Ennis of the state office in San Francisco.

They pointed out that "tuberculosis is still the gravest public health problem facing this country today because it kills more persons between the ages of 5 and 40 than any other disease."

The annual sale of Christmas Seals is the sole support of the work of the Tuberculosis Associations in California and throughout the Nation.

During the past several years, El Dorado county has taken an active part in this program and already volunteer workers are busy preparing for the advent of the 1940 Christmas Seal.

Those attending from this county were Mrs. Percy McNeil and Mrs. Swift, Berry from Camino; Mrs. Lloyd Austin, Fruit Ridge; Mrs. W. T. Henderson, Diamond Springs, and A. J. Blair, Placerville.

Again under the leadership of Dr. A. A. McKinnon, and with the continued splendid support of the people of El Dorado county, this association is looking forward to the response necessary for "preparedness" for better health.

Love Shy
By Nelly Graf
(AUTHOR OF "GIRLS WITHOUT MEN")

Marianne Minear lives on the wrong side of the little town of Centerville. Embittered when her high-school sweetheart deserts her for a girl who is well-to-do and socially prominent, she becomes convinced that love is cruel, and money everything. And grimly vows to have money some day. She goes to New York to take a job with a real-estate firm. In the same office is Leonard Bailey, who is deeply interested in her. But he is poor, and she cannot forget that money is now more important to her than love. She works hard and advances rapidly, but her greed for money comes between her and Leonard. When Harry Deslie, rich middle-aged bachelor, asks her to marry him, she accepts. But the next morning, when her boss, Mr. Gleason, calls her and Leonard into his office to make plans for a new subdivision, she tries to hide her ring from Leonard.

CHAPTER XVIII
I THINK you've been working wrong," Leonard said. "This is supposed to be a suburban colony for the middle class. Feature health and happiness for children."
"Very simple," grunted Gleason, "if you know how."
Leonard was thoughtful a moment.
"I'll tell you," he said. "Put on a sort of grand rally for several Sundays. Favors for the ladies, cold beer for the men. Model homes, a step ahead of modern, on display. A flock of youngsters playing happily."
"Youngsters?" Gleason frowned. "Yes. To feature this subdivision, Sunlit Acres, as the ideal spot for growing America. We'll fix up a sort of playground, rent a few Shetland ponies. Get local shopkeepers to donate things—like candy and ice cream—for the advertising."
"But where will you get the children?" asked Marianne.
"Orphans," Len said tersely. "It will be a treat for them. There's an orphanage not far from there where we can get them."

"AN IDEA," Gleason conceded. "We might have the first rally the first Sunday of next month."
"Sure," said Leonard. "There's plenty of time to get things ready."
"We might get the papers to use a story about it, built around the orphans," Marianne suggested.
"You take care of that," Gleason said. "And you go to the orphanage with Bailey. Pick out the cute, pretty kids—no pale sickly ones. Understand?"
"Certainly," Marianne agreed. "We can't pick and choose."
Leonard interposed. "We'll have to take them all."
"Leave that to Marianne," Gleason winked at her confidentially. "You can go this morning."
"Right now," Marianne added. As Marianne and Leonard started to leave he called. "Will one of you stop at the trouble shooter's desk. Tell him someone saw a rat"

The Ever-Present God

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Sept. 15 is Psalm 139, The Golden Text being John 14:23, "If a man love Me, he will keep my words; and My Father will love him, and We will come unto him, and make Our abode with Him.")

THIS IS our last lesson on the psalms for some time, and this 139th psalm is a beautiful one with which to close this series of lessons. We do not know when this psalm was written, only from its title we know it to be in the time of David; and nothing in the psalm indicates at what place it was written.

It is written in a devout mood, when the psalmist realized how omniscient—all present—is God; that the creator of man must know everything about him, his bodily makeup, his nature, his soul and spirit.

"Thou knowest my downings and mine uprisings; Thou understandest my thought afar off."
Have you ever tried to read another person's thoughts? All of us have at some time when we were very anxious to get the other's reactions to something. Sometimes we can do it very well, too, when the minds of both of us are occupied by the same trend of thought. But if the person whose thought we are trying to read does not want us to know what he is thinking, he can put on a "poker face," a mask of expressionlessness, and we cannot tell what his thoughts are.

We cannot do that with our Creator. He made us and He knows how our minds work because He created every bit of us. If our thoughts are not good, it is a startling thing to think that they are known—a strong incentive to keep our thoughts a higher things.

The psalmist's thought goes further, to the impossibility of escaping or hiding from the Maker. We can hide from our parents, from our playmates and friends. We can often hide from the government for a time, at least, if we have done enough wrong to warrant police search for us. But from the Maker of all we cannot hide. In most beautiful language the psalmist illustrates this thought:

"Whither shall I go from Thy spirit?
Or whither shall I flee from Thy presence?
If I ascend up into heaven, Thou art there:
If I make my bed in Sheol (hell), behold Thou art there.
If I take the wings of the morning,
And dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea;
Even there shall Thy hand lead me,
And Thy right hand shall hold me.
If I say: Surely the darkness shall overwhelm me,
And the light about me shall be night;
Even the darkness hideth not from Thee,
But the night shineth as the day:
The darkness and the light are both alike to Thee."

This should be a comforting thought, not a frightening one. God made us. He knows us—our weakness and strength—and He is with us always, in darkness and light, in joy and sorrow. Suddenly the psalmist turns from this happy and peaceful thought to one, seemingly of anger and hatred, urging God to slay the wicked and asserting his hatred for the enemies of the Lord. Thinking of God as love, justice, truth, righteousness, it is easy to feel intense anger at the wickedness, hatred, falsehood, cruelty, injustice we see on every hand. We can be filled with love, sympathy and understanding toward all men, but feel still a burning hatred of all this wickedness. Even Jesus showed a righteousness anger toward those who defamed God's house, and showed it by driving the cheating money changers from the temple.

The last two verses of the psalm are a prayer and an opening of the heart to Jehovah:

"Search me, O God, and know my heart: try me, and know my thoughts."
And see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting."

Our Golden Text is taken from John 14:23, where Jesus answers one Judas, not Judas Iscariot, saying: If a man love Me, he will keep My words; and My Father will love him, and We will come unto him, and make Our abode with him."

Bible selections will include the following passages from proverbs 8: 1, 20, 21: "Doth not wisdom cry? and understanding put forth her voice? . . . I lead in the way of righteousness, in the midst of the paths of judgment: That I may cause those that love me to inherit substance; and I will fill their treasures."

"DR. KILDARE" FEATURE AT EMPIRE FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

Recreating a great hospital for a motion picture and reproducing doctors in the persons of actors is almost as much of a task as originating the real thing. So declare the technicians and scientists who drop their real-life vocations to help present them on the screen in the "Dr. Kildare" medical-detective pictures, the fourth of which, "Dr. Kildare's Strange Case," opens Friday at the Empire Theatre.

As the series has proceeded, the Blair General Hospital, principal scene of the stories, has developed into a complete replica of a great modern hospital. It has its pathological laboratory, its bacteriological department, its pharmacy department. It has the latest modern operating rooms and equipment; even a modern hospital dietetic kitchen.

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios can probably boast the distinction of being the only studio to own a hospital. As each addition to the institution was built for different stories, all equipment was purchased and every set made permanent.

were sold last year? According to the American Bible Society, the Bible is still the best seller as 7,370,908 copies were sold. These circulated in more than forty countries and were translated in more than 200 languages.

Mignon Eberhart, one of our favorite mystery story writers, (her latest is "The Hangman's Whip") lives in a house that Washington occupied. The house is said to be haunted by a woman in white who floats about asking: "How are the Confeds making out?"

Marjorie Kinnans Rawling who wrote the immortal "Yearling" (and her latest is a volume of short stories "When the Whippoorwill") is vain about her cooking. She owns up to getting as much satisfaction from the preparation of a perfect dinner for her friends as from turning out a perfect paragraph for her stories. Incidentally, Hollywood is having almost as much difficulty in finding a perfect "Jody" as it had in finding a perfect Scarlett O'Hara. We hear that as many as 7500 boys have been interviewed as prospective heroes of "The Yearling" but

"WATERLOO BRIDGE" COMES TO EMPIRE SCREEN ON SUNDAY

Three years ago Robert Taylor returned from England raving about a young actress who had appeared with him in "A Yank at Oxford." Her name was Vivien Leigh, who stars in the Empire Theatre offering for Sunday and Monday, "Waterloo Bridge."

Now famous as Scarlett O'Hara, Miss Leigh was just beginning to win recognition for her dramatic talent when she met Taylor. And if Hollywood had listened to Taylor, she might have become known to American movie audiences that much sooner.

"Vivien showed all the promise then," he says, "which was to make her the perfect Scarlett, and more than that, will in time see her established as one of the screen's most versatile actresses."

From their very first meeting, Taylor remembers Miss Leigh for her vitality, her willingness to work hard and her intense interest in acting.

"I recall that after her first scenes in 'A Yank,' everyone from Director Jack Conway on down commented on Vivien's distinctive personality," Taylor remarked. "As the picture went on, we were amazed at her work. It didn't surprise me, during the making of 'The Wind,' when Clark Gable told me she was the most tireless actress he had ever known. While in England, we often worked late and had numerous opportunities to discuss the screen and mutual ambitions. We discovered one thing in common. Both our first screen tests were flops. Vivien didn't have an easy time at first but stuck to her guns because she always had wanted to be an actress and refused to accept failure."

GOATS IRRITATE RODZINSKI STOCKBRIDGE, Mass. (UP)—Vexed when his rest was broken by the bleating of goats, Dr. Artur Rodzinski, Cleveland Symphony Orchestra conductor, placed the livestock on his farm for sale. Rodzinski said he and his wife would continue to use the farm as a vacation retreat provided they found a goat buyer.

Today's Sport Parade

By Henry McLemore
United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, (UP)—A bushy up from Tulsa has made good with the Cubs.

Thrown in against the tough Brooklyn Dodgers and the tougher Brooklyn fans in his first start since leaving the Texas League, the big fellow pitched a six-hitter to win, 3 to 2.

He wasn't afraid of Ducky Medwick, Babe Phelps, Dixie Walker or any of the other Brooklyn sluggers. And the raucous, cruel jeers of the toughest crowd in baseball might just as well have been spoken in a language he didn't understand, for all the difference it seemed to make to him.

Because the bushy who made good at Ebbetts Field was Dizzy Dean, once of the majors, late of the minors. For one day at least he experienced the thrill of walking the very last foot of the comeback trail, and of once more stepping into the sun, be it only a sunset.

The re-lived Dean was hardly recognizable to those fans who came out expecting to see the same old Dizzy, with his arrogance, clowning, and jesting manner. He warmed up before the game without so much as a glance at the stands, and once he started working he concentrated on every pitch as though it were going to be his last one on earth. He was slow, cautious, and often stopped to study the signals.

The big crowd, absolutely devoid of sentiment as only a Brooklyn crowd could be expected to be, rode him unmercifully for the full nine innings. I watched the game from the stands, not the press box, and from every side of me continual taunts were hurled at the aging athlete trying to regain a bit of his past glory.

When the arm that used to be so accurate would walk a man, down from the stands would come the shout "Back to Tulsa, you bum."

When the big right arm that used to "fog 'em" through would float a "nothing" ball up to the plate, the kindly Brooklynites would shout "Me and my brudder, Paul, we're great guys ain't we?"

When Dizzy was reached for a hit a chorus would deprecate,—"Knock the bushy out, boys, knock it down his throat."

But the innings kept coming and going and they didn't knock it down his throat. Dizzy's arm isn't what it once was, but it's a whole lot better than when the Cubs sent him down to Texas. His motion is much more free now, and when he gets in a tight spot he can dish up a fast ball that would pass for a fast ball in almost any company. And there is nothing wrong with either his head or his heart.

He knows how to pitch. He doesn't give the hitters many good balls to hit. He's always slipping across the corners, and mixing 'em up.

And the clutch doesn't find him wanting. In the sixth inning, with the bases loaded and two down, he silenced the crowd by striking out Coscarat.

He was an unbelievably subdued Dean, even when he walked into the clubhouse. He was one of the last players to reach the dressing room and his only show of feeling came when he tossed his glove above his head and called out "Thankya fella. Thankya, Thanks, all of you."

He started throwing things in his traveling case, but in two and three the Cubs interrupted him to shake his hand, pat him on the back and tell him he pitched a helluva game.

"That was a good one to win," Dizzy told me. "A mighty good one. Yeah. I had pretty good stuff. Naw, I didn't get tired. Even in the ninth there wasn't any ache in my arm. It felt good and loose."

Then of' Diz pulled off his clothing and started singing in the shower.

COUNTY GROWERS PIONEERED IN VOLUNTARY STANDARDIZATION OF FRUIT PACK, NOW OF STATE-WIDE IMPORTANCE

Indicating the importance of standardization to California agriculture, particularly in marketing, the bureau of fruit and vegetable standardization of the state department of agriculture reports that thirty-five fruits, vegetables and nuts, eggs and honey are on the lists of farm commodities covered by standards to which they must conform when sold.

S. S. Rogers, the present bureau chief, gives a summary of the work and history of standardization as follows:

In addition to eggs and honey, standards are included for apples, avocados, strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, dewberries, loganberries, cherries, oranges, lemons, grapefruit, dates, grapes, peaches, pears, oriental persimmons, plums, globe artichokes, pomegranates, walnuts, quinces, asparagus, Brussels sprouts, cantaloupes, carrots, cauliflower, broccoli, celery, lettuce, Persian melons, casabas, honeydew melons, honeyball melons, watermelons, onions, peas, potatoes, sweet potatoes and tomatoes.

Although the first California agricultural standardization law was not enacted until 1915, the idea had been given a great deal of attention by growers since 1881, at which time it was discussed at early farmers' conventions.

Frequently these farmers' conventions recommended that something practical be done to bring about standardization of agriculture products, but the lawmakers did not act on it until 1915.

One of the outstanding efforts at voluntary standardization was that of the El Dorado County Standardized Fruit Alliance, organized in 1910. Headquarters were in Placerville and any grower who would have his fruit inspected by an alliance inspector could join.

The object of this alliance was: "To encourage the growing of better fruit, and to protect the interests of the business in the methods of handling and packing the same."

The alliance concerned itself with interstate shipments only and declared in general "that all fruit destined for interstate shipment from this county shall be free from worm, scab or other defects."

The alliance set up specifications for the packing of Bartlett pears, peaches, plums and prunes, grapes, cherries and apples.

Growers in Placer and Tulare counties also set up voluntary standardization groups, but it soon became apparent that to make such practices generally effective, standardization of agricultural products would have to be accomplished on a statewide basis.

The appeal of fruit and vegetable growers resulted in the writing of the first standardization law which covered cherries, peaches, apricots, pears, plums, grapes, berries and cantaloupes. Set up in the law

2 RELIEF COMMISSION VACANCIES FILLED BY APPOINTMENTS

SACRAMENTO, (UP)—Two of four vacancies on the state relief commission were filled by Gov. Culbert L. Olson with the appointment of Dean McHenry of the University of California at Los Angeles and Dr. Chester K. Gummess of Los Angeles.

McHenry replaced Mrs. Robert F. Fisher of Carliotta, Humboldt county, who resigned. Dr. Gummess, a physician and surgeon, succeeded Col. E. L. Peterson, Corona publisher. Peterson published anti-Olson editorials in his newspaper and was criticized by the governor for improper political activity for allegedly violating the "little Hatch act" provisions of the relief act.

Add War Horrors: Khaki Puzzles Blondes

LONDON (UP)—Blondes are going to turn pink, because they have found out that their soldier boy friends prefer brunettes or chestnuts—or pinks.

Not blondes, for khaki and blonde don't go together too well.

The new pink fashion is rapidly becoming popular, especially among women in uniform.

The new pink tint is the invention of a West End hair stylist, who said that uniforms are playing a big part in hair fashions.

Georgetown Miners triumphed over the Newcastle Firemen Sunday at Newcastle with a score of 17 to 13. The highlight of the game occurred when Gregory, Newcastle third sacker, slammed a home run into the garden of a residence in back of left field. Sleeper, the Georgetown left fielder, could not find the ball in the flowers and Gregory went home while Sleeper and other outfielders were hunting the horsehide among the daisies. The teams will meet next Sunday at Georgetown in the final championship game.

FHA PLAN OF FINANCING OPEN TO FARMERS, OFFICIAL NOTES

Farmers now may participate in all the benefits of the Federal Housing plan of financing, and several agriculturalists in this county already have taken advantage of the opportunity to make needed improvements under long-term FHA-insured loans, according to U. S. Burge, farm reviewer for the Federal Housing Administration, who maintains offices in the post office and customs house, Oakland.

Farm land may be either bought or refinanced under this plan, it was declared, when at least 15 per cent of the amount of the loan is used for materials and labor on construction or repair of farm buildings.

Loans are made through local lending institutions approved by the Federal Housing Administration and are insurable in amounts up to $16,000.

Under new FHA regulations, Mr. Burge explained, the interest rate is limited to 4 1/2 per cent, plus a mortgage insurance charge of one-half per cent. Payments are made in monthly, semi-annual, or annual payments, depending upon the distribution of the borrower's income. Loans may be written for as much as 80 per cent of the appraised value of land and improvements, in some cases 90 per cent, and repaid over any convenient period up to 20 years, with an additional five years, when necessary, on 90 per cent loans.

"This means," said Mr. Burge, "that the responsible farmer now can provide his family with a modern attractive home without waiting years to accumulate the cash. Also it means that an able tenant farmer can buy his own farm, and that the farmer burdened with a short-term, high interest mortgage can replace them with an FHA-insured mortgage, modernize his farm, and clear the indebtedness completely with convenient payments."

TAKE NO CHANCES

MADERA, (UP)—Voters of the Trigo school district apparently want Howard McNeil to serve on the school board. McNeil, who holds a position on the board that doesn't expire until next year, was elected to a second position on the board. Thinking his term expired this year the voters made him a successful write-in candidate.

Hearse Improper Vehicle For Fishing Trip Use

CAPE MAY COURT HOUSE, N. J. (UP)—The proper vehicle for a fishing trip is not a hearse, Frank A. Erwin of Philadelphia is convinced.

Erwin, as the driver, and James Weeden, borrowed a hearse belonging to Weeden's brother, Edward, for a fishing excursion to Wildwood. Near here, however, the hearse blew a tire and overturned.

Erwin was fined for driving without a license, careless driving and using fictitious tags.
